L.3.5.a Literal & Nonliteral

I can distinguish the literal and nonliteral meanings of words and phrases in context (e.g., take steps).

A literal meaning of a word or phrase is the _____ definition. Sometimes authors like to use nonliteral words and phrases to make a comparison or exaggerated statement. In this case, the meaning is _____ than the basic definition the words imply. The nonliteral meaning is a figure of speech called an _____.

It is raining cats
and dogs.
It is raining very hard.

You let the cat out
of the bag.
You gave away a secret.

It's no use crying over spilt milk.
Don't get upset about something bad that you can't change.

What's wrong? The cat
got your tongue?
Someone will not speak.

You need to zip
your lip.
You need to keep quiet.

Don't open a can of worms.
Don't create a situation
that will cause trouble.

Nonliteral Words and Phrases in Mentor Texts

“But I must find an umbrella before I go. They say it is going to rain cats and dogs.”
‘Goody!’ said Amelia Bedelia. ‘We will get a free pet. Would you like a dog or a cat?’
(Parish, Amelia Bedelia and the Cat, 2008, p. 6-7 ).

“My goose is cooked.” . . . “Social butterfly,” . . . “More fun than a barrel of monkeys,” (Leedy, There’s a Frog in My Throat: 440 Animal Sayings a Little Bird Told Me, 2003).

Practice

Identify if each sentence uses literal (L) or nonliteral (NL) meanings of words and phrases.

- ___ 1. The toddler cried his eyes out when his favorite toy broke.
